ABSTRACT
On behalf of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville (UT), the Postsecondary Education Research Center (PERC) examined the use of micro- or emergency grants for students at aspirational and peer institutions. Additionally, PERC staff gathered information from programs at institutions with high Pell grant and high retention/graduation metrics across the United States. PERC staff reviewed information for 38 institutions and identified two program formats for microgrants or emergency funding for students: short-term or emergency loans and micro- or emergency grants. This report provides an overview of the two program formats, eligibility criteria, summary of current UT programs, and a recommendation and proposal for Smokey’s Grant.
Overview

On behalf of the University of Tennessee, Knoxville (UT), the Postsecondary Education Research Center (PERC) staff examined the use of micro- or emergency grants for students at aspirational and peer institutions across the United States. PERC staff also included institutions that have a high amount of Pell Grant recipients that also have either high retention or high graduation rates. This report relates the findings of this examination along with recommendations and considerations for implementation.

Methods

In October 2017, PERC staff began reviewing websites from 17 institutions using a list of 6 aspirational and 11 comparable institutions suggested by Serena Matsunaga, Academic Analytics & University Strategy Advisor. Matsunaga recommended including institutions that also had a high percentage of Pell Grant recipients and high retention and/or graduation rates. Using the Integrated Postsecondary Education Data System (IPEDS), PERC staff identified the top 10 institutions with a high percentage of Pell Grant recipients and high retention rates and the top 10 institutions with a high percentage of Pell Grant and high graduation rates to include in the review. The review did not include any U.S. Territory in the review that appeared in the IPEDS data\(^1\). In addition, PERC staff included Georgia State University because of a recent news story where technology billionaire, Bill Gates highlighted the success of underrepresented populations and lower socioeconomic status students had a higher graduation rate.\(^2\) A complete listing of all 38 institutions and institutional data appears in Appendix A.

Program Findings

Upon reviewing the institutions for a micro- or emergency grants, 14 institutions were excluded. These institutions either did not have a micro- or emergency grant type program or there was not enough information online to decide because the institution named a program but provided no information about it online. Eleven institutions had a short-term or emergency loan administered through the institution. Eleven universities had a micro- or emergency grant for students administered by various offices on campus. Two institutions had some combination of short-term loans, grants, or the college works with external partners to administer the programs. For purposes of this report, PERC focused on the 22 institutions that had either a short-term or emergency loan (Table 1) or grant program (Table 2).

Program: Short-Term or Emergency Loans

At 5 of the 11 institutions that had short-term or emergency loans, the financial aid office administered the program. At the other institutions the Dean of Students, Foundation, Student Services or Success Center, or Treasury Services administered the funds. These loans typically derived from private donors and fundraising efforts. Loan amounts ranged from $350 to $1,000. In many instances, the institution also limited the total number of loans available per semester as well as the number of loans a student could receive. Interest rates for these loans ranged from no interest to 9% interest. Most institutions were no interest loans and two institutions were 8% or 9% interest if the loan was past due but no-interest if paid on time. Five institutions provided no information on terms of the loan. Repayment terms ranged from 30 days to 90 days maximum, with five institutions choosing a 30-day repayment period. Half of the institutions with short-term or emergency loans did not provide any interest or terms of repayment information. Other requirements such as enrollment or GPA varied greatly by institution. Appendix B contains images of a sample website showing requirements. For any loan, the institution required an institutional application. Appendix C contains a sample loan application.

Program: Micro- or Emergency Grants

At 6 of the 11 institutions that had a micro- or emergency grant, the Office of the Dean of Students administered the program. At other institutions financial aid, multicultural, student affairs, or the Vice President for Student Affairs administrated the funds. The grants typically were the results of private donors and fundraising efforts including many family and parent associations. Amounts for the grants typically ranged from $500 to $1,000. Terms and processes for receiving the grants varied by institution. Appendix D contains a sample micro- or emergency grant website. Appendix E contains a sample application for an institution’s micro- or emergency grant.

Summary of Eligibility Criteria

Eligibility criteria comprised two categories: (a) types of eligible expenses and (b) student requirements. Items that were most commonly eligible for the use of funds were unplanned expenses like:

- Food,
- Auto repairs,
- Medical expenses not covered by insurance,
• Childcare,
• Temporary loss of income or spouse’s income,
• Loss of items to fire, flood, or other natural disaster, or
• Travel because of a death in the immediate family

This is not an all-inclusive list; however, most institutions did not allow the use of funds for institutional charges. An exception was Virginia Tech, which allowed students to use the funds for any institutional or non-institutional charges. Figure 1 provides a visual representation of the terms used for eligible expenses based on the 22 websites reviewed for short-term or emergency loans and micro- or emergency loans.

The second category used to determine eligibility was student requirements. Items that were most commonly mentioned for student requirements included:

• Enrolled at least half-time,
- Demonstrated a financial crisis or emergency,
- Could provide documentations of financial crisis or emergency, and
- Were U.S. citizens or permanent residents

This is not an all-inclusive list or student eligibility requirements. Figure 2 provides a visual representation of the terms used for eligible expenses based on the 22 websites reviewed for short-term or emergency loans and micro- or emergency loans.

Emergency Loans

How do emergency loans work?

Emergency loans are interest-free loans available to Purdue University students registered in the current semester, and must be used for educational expenses. Students who meet ALL eligibility criteria may borrow a maximum of $800 per semester (all summer modules combined count as one semester). Students may borrow up to $400 at a time.

Loan applicants must visit the Office of the Dean of Students in Schleman Hall (SCHL), Room 207, from 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday through Friday, to apply for the emergency loan. Students can call 765-494-1747 with questions about emergency loans, but must come to the office in order to be approved. Please keep in mind that a loan will take time and student’s showing up at 4:00 p.m. may not have the money deposited into their account that evening.

How may I get an emergency loan?

- You must be currently registered for at least one (1) credit hour at the time of application for the loan, AND
- You must not have any holds on your Purdue account, AND
- If you have borrowed an emergency loan in the past, you must have paid the loan(s) back on time or:
  - In the case that your most recent payment was past due, you must complete the Financial Responsibility Program in order to become eligible for subsequent loans.
  - If you have acquired two late payments, you are no longer eligible for emergency loans.

If you meet the criteria to receive a loan, you must talk with a drop-in staff member and do the following:

- Show a Purdue ID Card or other government-issued photo ID
- Complete an online application
- Provide your driver’s license or other state-issued ID number
- Provide the names, addresses and telephone numbers of two (2) references (these references cannot be in the same household as each other)
- Enter your Social Security number on a secure financial site
- Create a password that can be used for a secure financial account
- E-sign a promissory note that outlines the conditions and repayment requirements of the loan

Emergency loans must be paid back within thirty (30) calendar days.

If you are not able to pay your loan back by the due date, you must contact the University Receivables and Collections Office (URCO) either in person in Schleman Hall, Room 334, or by phone at 765-494-9459 prior to the due date in order to make alternate payment arrangements.

- If you pay your loan back on or before the original due date, or the agreed-upon due date with URCO, the payment will be considered on time.
- If you do not pay the loan back on or before the original due date, or the agreed-upon due date with URCO, the payment will be considered late.

We strongly recommend that you pay back emergency loans in person at the Purdue University Receivables and Collections Office, located in Schleman Hall, Room 334. If you mail a payment or make an online payment, it is recommended that you do this 4-5 business days in advance of the deadline, in order to allow processing time. Payments received or that post after the deadline will be considered past due.

If a loan is paid past due:

If you have a history of one (1) past-due loan, you must complete the Financial Responsibility Program in order to be eligible for subsequent emergency loans. In order to complete the program, you must call the Office of the Dean of Students at 765-494-1747 or visit Schleman Hall, Room 207, to schedule an appointment. The program should take approximately 30 minutes to complete. It is recommended that students with past-due payments complete the Financial Responsibility http://www.purdue.edu/advocacy/students/financial/emergencyLoan.html

Students who have a history of two (2) past-due emergency loans will not be eligible for subsequent emergency loans.

How does ACH distribution work?

An ACH transaction allows us to deposit the emergency loan directly into your bank account. In order to process the ACH transaction you will need to bring your Bank Routing Number/ABA and Account Number. The Bank Routing Number and Account Number can be found on the bottom of a check. This information will be entered directly into the loan application by the student.

STUDENT EMERGENCY FUND

The UGA Student Emergency Fund is available to provide limited, one-time financial assistance to enrolled students who are unable to meet immediate, essential expenses because of temporary hardship related to an emergency situation.

How the Fund Operates

UGA campus partners in the Office of Student Financial Aid and the Division of Student Affairs will review submitted applications and determine any appropriate funding source and amount. Applicants may be required to provide additional information or take further steps as part of the application review. UGA emergency funding takes existing financial aid into consideration in determining any award.

While we attempt to support as many students as possible with emergency funding, we are not able to grant every request, or in other cases, offer the full amount requested.

Please note on submission your request will be distributed immediately to campus partners for review. Given the complexity of individual circumstances and the volume of student requests, it may take 2-7 business days to receive a full response on your application. However, staff from Student Care and Outreach will be in contact in the interim to see if there are additional, non-financial, resources at UGA that may be of support. A listing of campus hardship resources is available here http://financialhardship.uga.edu.

Types of Expenses that May Be Covered

A range of circumstances may result in financial hardships. Typical expenses covered include, but are not limited to:

- Medications or other health-related costs
- Rent, utilities, or other essential household expenses
- Books or other essential academic expenses
- Personal safety needs (e.g., changing a lock)
- Replacement of essential personal belongings due to natural disaster, fire, theft, or other unforeseen circumstance
- Travel costs related to a death or serious illness in the immediate family

Eligibility Requirements

- Applicant must be a currently enrolled student at the University of Georgia and have temporary financial hardship resulting from an emergency situation.
- Other possible resources must have been considered and are either unavailable or insufficient. Please note unwillingness to take out student loans does not constitute a financial hardship.
- As requested, applicant must be able to provide sufficient documentation of financial hardship.
